About Us

It's a simple, user-friendly starting point for young people in search of basic information about American politics.

The News section contains a brief summary of the top political news story of the day. Q. & A. highlights interviews with people of differing viewpoints who are directly involved in government and politics, academics who teach political science and history, and "regular people" affected by government policies. The Commentary section contains PoliticalPrimer.com's brief analysis of politics-related news, issues and events. The Glossary section supplies short definitions and explanations of political references and terms. The Links page furnishes hypertext links to some of the most informative politics sites on the web. And, should you care to, you can find out About Us and voice your opinion.

So come on in. Your Uncle Sam has something to say to you.
